Cured His Rupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no rest time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation. If you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 245 E. Belter, cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured. You may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and worry and danger of an operation.—Advertisement.

SEVERAL LOOKS AGAINST PROTEST FOR LEAVING TROOPS IN HOLLAND

High Officer Thinks Allies Must Land Troops in Holland.

FRAGUENATE, Servia, Feb. 18.—While visiting in the field, a high officer actively engaged in the Serbian operations discussed the Austrian menace of a new invasion of Servia with a large army composed of Austro-Hungarian and German troops. He said, "We are doing our duty, reorganizing the army, increasing daily its might, and, if God will, we shall be victorious as heretofore."

Passing on to the general situation, he said, "The allies can be perfectly satisfied with the results achieved during the last year against the Teutonic combination. Nobody can doubt that the Germans will be definitely routed, but there remains the question of how that aim can be obtained as soon as possible with the least sacrifices. No doubt Germany will continue a stubborn resistance, counting on exhausting her resources, and she may sacrifice her allies, Austria-Hungary and Turkey, and endeavor to conclude peace, leaving her power unbroken and Europe eternally menaced with new bloodshed and horrors."

"When do you foresee the end of the war?"

"It is difficult to make predictions, but the newspapers were well informed in saying at the beginning of the present struggle that the war would last a long time, thereby encouraging people not to lose heart."

"The fighting on the western front has assumed the character of siege battles, and can be prolonged indefinitely. It appears, moreover, that Germany, after having vainly attempted to deal a decisive blow to the Russians upon the Vistula, and having exhausted her offensive energy, will also pass to a war of entrenchment and defense."

Relying upon the first class fortresses of Konigsberg, Thorn, Posen and Cracow, and having a most admirable system of railroads and canals, Germany, on the defensive, detain overwhelming Russian forces, which for offensive purposes will badly feel the lack of roads and railway lines.

"We must remember that Germany has for long been preparing for the present war, and has used all the technical means which would give her any advantage on both fronts. It remains to attack Germany from where she never expected it, and where she is unable to parry it. Sound strategy demands a concentration of forces, but every rule has exceptions, and a strong diversionary movement prepared can give the happier results."

"Must Land Troops in Holland." "Obviously Germany would be lost if Great Britain landed considerable bodies of troops in Holland or Denmark, and if the allies, aiming at a swift and decisive victory, encountered the Serbian front and enable the Serbian troops to undertake a strong offensive it would have incalculable advantages."

"After getting a firm base in Austria, the allies would menace Germany seriously from the south, a quarter they never expected, and the blow. The Germans would be obliged to turn their front and change their whole plan of campaign. Then the offensive in the direction of the Rhine and through Silesia would be fast and decisive."

KAISER WILL APOLOGIZE TO U. S. AMBASSADOR

Basel, Switzerland, Feb. 18.—When ambassador Gerard visits emperor William at the fortress of Konigsberg, east Prussia, the kaiser will apologize to the American diplomat for a hostile demonstration which occurred in a Berlin theater on the night of February 9, according to a telegram received here from the German capital. Ambassador Gerard was made the object of a demonstration when he and a party attended a theater in Berlin and a man in the audience protested because they were speaking English. When informed that his remarks were directed against the American ambassador, the man began a violent tirade against the United States for permitting the exportation of arms to the allies. The kaiser's intervention was finally suppressed by the theater attendants.

Note of Reply to U. S. Denies Validity of Contentions About Ships.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 18.—An attempted refutation of arguments presented by the United States in its recent protest against British interference with American shipping is contained in the second and complete note of reply sent by Great Britain to the United States through the medium of ambassador Page at London.

The note, addressed to the ambassador, says Sir Edward Grey under date of February 10, denies that the depression in American industries is due to activities of the British fleet and suggests among other causes the shortage of shipping facilities, the diminution of cotton trade and the destruction by submarine mines "laid by the enemy indiscriminately," of many neutral vessels.

After giving a lengthy and detailed answer to the charge that American ships and cargoes were being unduly detained, the communication contains the concluding paragraph, the announcement that Great Britain intends to take retaliatory measures against the Germans' submarine campaign against enemy ships but does not reveal their nature.

Will Try to Avoid Injury. Concealing that foodstuffs intended for the civil population of a country are not contraband, the British government points out that "in any country in which there exists such tremendous quantities of foodstuffs, as now obtains in Germany, there is no clear division between those whom the government is responsible for feeding and those whom it is not."

"It will still be our endeavor," says the final paragraph, "to avoid injury and loss to neutrals but the announcement of their intention to sink merchant vessels and their cargoes without verification of their status as contraband, and without making any provision for the safety of noncombatant crews or giving them a chance of saving their lives has made it necessary for his master's government to consider what measures they should adopt to protect their interests. It is impossible for our government to govern from rules and precedents and for the other to remain bound by them."

Supplementing the preliminary reply of several weeks ago, the new note is about 10,000 words long and includes not only statistical argument, but a further discussion of the legal principles involved.

Detaining Cargoes.

Discussing the general proposition that a belligerent is entitled to capture contraband goods on their way to the enemy, the British note traces the origin of the right of interception and speaks of the new devices encountered from time to time for dispatching contraband goods to an enemy. Here the doctrine of continuous voyage as enunciated during the civil war by Secretary Seward is quoted at length and the question of ultimate destination argued in detail. To justify the detention of suspected cargoes when passing between neutral countries and taking them into ports for examination, the cases of American prizes during the Spanish-American war are also cited, and the note says these precedents are inconsistent with the statement of the British government made in a recent note that the British ambassador at Washington, November 7, which insisted that search should be made on the high seas, "at the time of the vessel," and that "the conclusion of the search should rest upon the evidence found on the ship and investigation, and not upon circumstances aside from external sources."

Search in Calm Waters.

The foreign secretary reiterates that the increased size of steamships necessitates search in calm waters and insists that during the Russo-Japanese war and the present war, the British vessels were made to deviate from their course and follow the cruisers to some spot where the risk of visit and search was more conveniently carried out, and in both cases, "although questioned at first, Great Britain finally acquiesced."

To take a ship into port, the note contends, is not to be looked upon "as a new belligerent right, but as an adaptation of the existing right to the modern conditions of commerce." It must be exercised with due regard to neutral interests and it would be unreasonable to expect a neutral vessel to make long deviations from her course for this purpose.

For this reason, it is asserted, neutral merchantmen were encouraged to visit some British port on their route to avoid the alternative of keeping a vessel waiting perhaps for days for better weather conditions on the high seas.

"It is common experience of every war," continues the note, "that neutrals whose attempts to escape the war zone are frustrated by belligerent trading are frustrated by their government to urge that diplomatic remonstrances should be made on their behalf and that redress should be obtained for them in this way."

"JAPAN IS MAKING HAY" IS VIEW IN ENGLAND

London, Eng., Feb. 18.—"Gloom in Europe in sunshine for Japan, so Japan is making hay," is the headline in the Manchester Guardian regarding the Japanese demands made upon China. The Guardian contends that in meeting Japan's very comprehensive projects in Manchuria, Shantung province, eastern Mongolia, the Yangtze valley and in Peking, China has lost the advantages which she had before August of last year. Her European friends are occupied, the paper says, and the United States, which still has the guarantors of the "open door" policy, has urgent business closer home.

AUSTRIA GATHERS TROOPS ON ITALIAN FRONTIER

Geneva, Switzerland, Feb. 18.—In anticipation of Italy's probable entrance into the war, Austria, for the past 10 days, has been gathering troops on the Italian frontier. Artillery has been massed to dominate the Tyrolean passes.

Swiss, Italian and Austrian soldiers are close on one another on the lonely three corners' frontier of the Alps at a height of from 4000 to 8000 feet and frequently fraternize in the deep snow. The Swiss soldiers usually act as the interpreters between Austrians and Italians.

GERMANY MAY DEPORT MANY IN ORDER TO SAVE FOOD

Copenhagen, Denmark, Feb. 18.—In order to save food, Germany intends ordering 5,000,000 subjects who possess independent income and are ineligible for military service, to go to neutral countries and remain there until the war is over, according to reports in circulation here.

It is planned, according to the report, that 3,000,000 of these persons shall go to the Scandinavian countries, 1,000,000 to Holland, and 2,000,000 to Switzerland.
